The Center for Iberian and Latin American Studies is excited to spotlight the internationally renowned film director and this year’s San Diego Latino Film Festival guest director:

Miguel Littín

Miguel Littín was born on August 9, 1942 in Palmilla, Colchagua Province, Chile. He was born to a Palestinian father and a Greek mother. Littín was exiled to Spain in 1973 after Augusto Pinochet rose to power in a violent military coup that ousted democratically elected president Salvador Allende. Littín became the subject of Nobel Laureate Gabriel García Márquez’s book Clandestine in Chile: The Adventures of Miguel Littín. One of Latin America’s most respected film directors and screen writers, Chile’s Miguel Littín was twice Oscar nominated for Best Foreign Language Film with Letters from Marusia (1975) and Alsinoand the Condor (1982). Miguel Littín has returned to Chile to continue making films.
